THE NEWS.
The news from Vicksburg does not materially affect the "situation" at that point. Word comes that the rebels inside that doomed city are about exhausted, and must soon yield to the outside pressure. We hope so, and that would immensely add to the value of a military demonstration on Haines' Bluff, but with doubtful success.

Forrest made another demonstration on Trione, Tennessee, a few days since, and was badly handled. Rebel cavalry raiders prove a paying business, but now, with the arrival of the 10th Illinois, the war of the rebels is really over.

A new and undeniably an imposing movement of Lee's army toward Culpeper, but precisely what object is not apparent to the Federals. Whether it is to hook the rebels north, or to be prepared to meet an intervention of the enemy, which is being urged by the inventors.

The report that comes from rebel sources of the defeat of Banks by Kirby Smith, is not entitled to the first degree of credit.

We have had like reports from the same source on several occasions, and each has been untrue. Kirby Smith is doing the kind of fighting, nor has he been since the commencement of the rebellion.
